Notes from the teams. . .

Here are some comments from the teams about what they experienced on the October mission. Although the visits in 'homes' didn't happen quite as we were expecting, there were many visits, talking and praying with people. Here is Kevin Powell's (New Hope Baptist, Yellville) experience in his words.

Thanks for praying

It is extremely hard to decide what is the best thing about the trip. One must choose between multiple goods to decide that and that's almost an impossible task. I was extremely nervous about the home visits (mostly because it contrary to my personal comfort level), but I was saddened to leave each home. I also wished for the opportunity to be in every visit. Two very important things happened to me that I wish to share. The fact that God can take something that happened to me in which He taught me something and use it to encourage someone on the other side of world is absolutely amazing. God grew my sense of His enormity on this trip. Since my own salvation, I've had a concern for others salvation, but it was first time I was moved to tears for concern for a lost person. I think it was a tiny step in the understanding of God's concern and desire for all people. I do not have enough wisdom or experience to spot improvements. I saw God move and how could you improve that. I do think more time there would have been nice, but I also understand the that was beyond my control. I desire to return to Udmurtia, but the is up to God. I shall strive to go where God says to go, and will eagerly await the next opportunity. God bless you, Kevin
